Sebastian Butterweck
Agile Coach and Atlassian Consultant

Working with Scrum for more than 6 years, Sebastian is convinced that the success or failure of a dev team is highly depending on the degree of transparency that the team shows - both towards external and internal stakeholders.

He supported dev teams from the fields of web, embedded and devops both as a product owner and scrum master. Also, he has a very good technical understanding and can communicate to developers on a technical level. His strength is the ability to take different perspectives, mediate and translate.
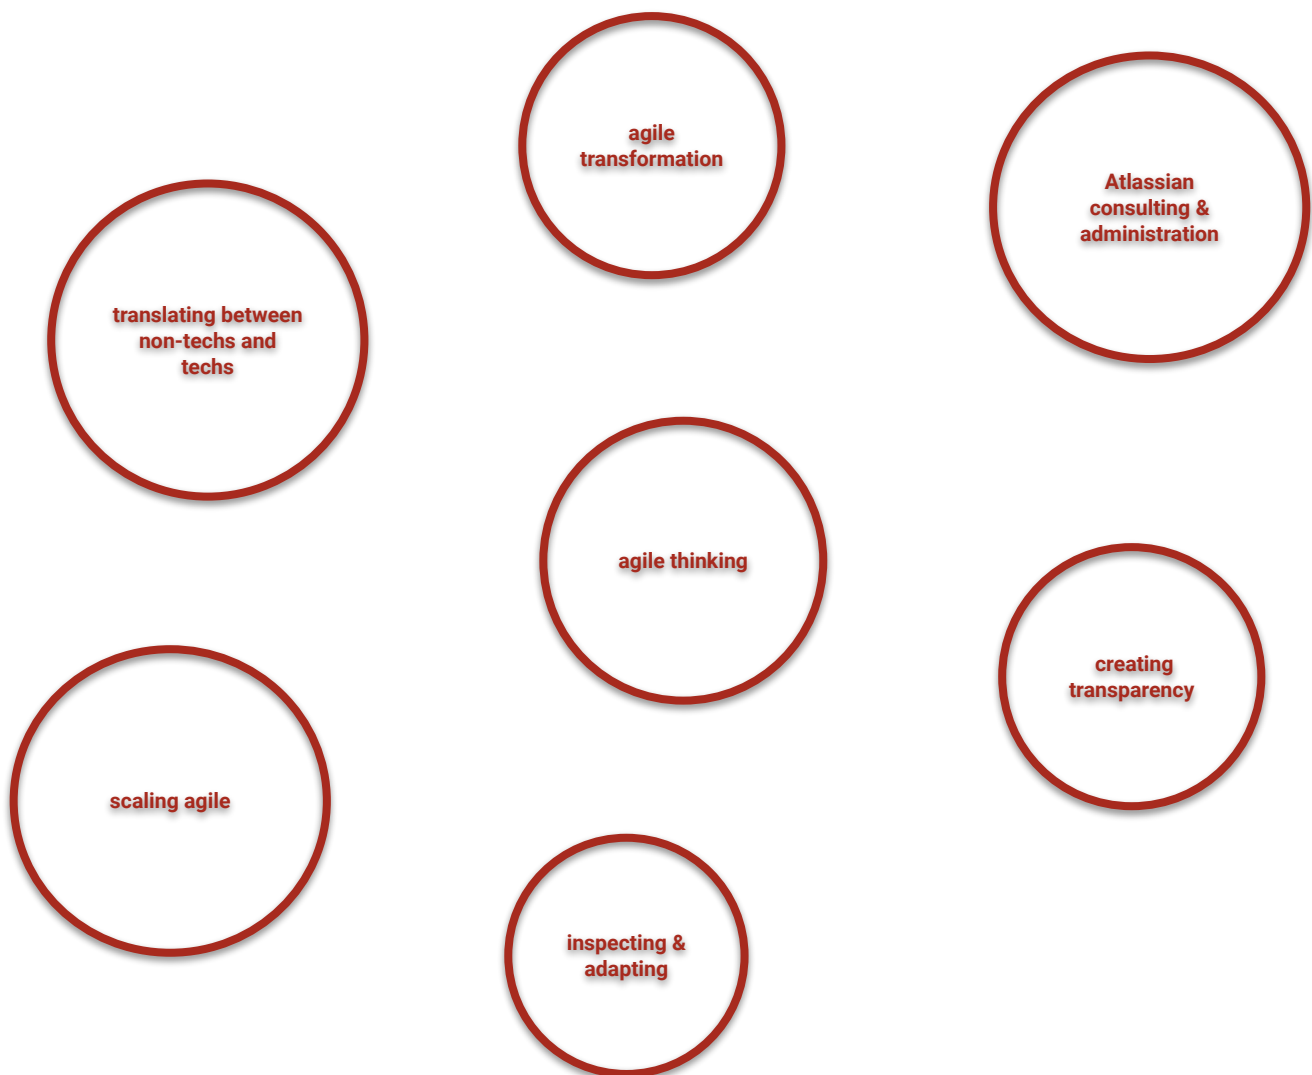

As an Atlassian consultant, he was responsible for administering Jira, Confluence, Bitbucket and Fisheye on both application and server level and providing support and consultation to development teams and management in a 2.000 user environment.
